The growing acceptance of Social Emotional Learning as a key support to student success has been responded to by state and local administrators in the implementation of SEL standards within the school system. However, the absence of networked organizations from which families receive SEL support has further complicated their access to tools and materials for home based instruction and modeling of these formative skills.

This issue of Capture the Core shares specific ways teachers can support families in their capacity around Self-Awareness, Self-Management, Social Awareness and Relationship building, and Responsible Decision-Making.

Note that this not an exhaustive list of resources, however, these are a few activities for families to practice building developmentally appropriate skills.

Teachers Supporting Families Supporting Social Emotional Development

- Self-Awareness
  - Be careful to not label your child’s feelings for them. Asking what emotions are attached to observable behaviors helps them self identify.

- Self-Management
  - Try and frame decisions through ‘choices’ - each with it’s own pre-explained consequence.
  - Being part of the family means offering help with the family needs. Assign small chores weekly.

- Social Awareness
  - Providing transportation is a great time to allow for continued conversations.
  - Nurture empathy in their social interactions.

- Relationship Building
  - Consistently ask your child(ren) how they would deal with different opportunities (positive and negative peer pressure).
  - Share your views on responsible online behavior as it relates to social media.

- Responsible Decision-Making
  - Discuss safe and smart choices with your youth, especially regarding issues around health and wellness.
  - Begin allowing your middle-schooler to participate and share regarding family issues.
